Oasis nominated for the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame

Manchester bands Oasis and New Order are among the 14 acts being considered for inclusion in the prestigious Rock and Roll Hall of Fame this year

Manchester bands Oasis and New Order are among the 14 acts being considered for inclusion in the prestigious Rock and Roll Hall of Fame this yearThey're joined by artists such as Mariah Carey, Cyndi Lauper and The White Stripes on the 2025 longlist.Half of the 14 nominees are first-timers, including English punk star Billy Idol, rock and roll pioneer Chubby Checker, and "mad dog with soul" Joe Cocker.Performers become eligible for nomination

25 years after the release of their first commercial recording. Voting starts now, with the finalists revealed in April.They're joined by artists such as Mariah Carey, Cyndi Lauper and The Whitman.

Half of the 14 nominees are first-timers, including English punk star Billy Idol, rock and roll pioneer Chubby Checker, and "mad dog with soul" Joe Cocker.

Performers become eligible for nomination 25 years after the release of their first commercial recording. Voting starts now, with the finalists revealed. the second time Oasis have been nominated, having first appeared on the ballot in 2024.Their inclusion comes as the band gear up for a sold-out reunion tour, which kicks off in Cardiff this July.But singer Liam Gallagher has previously criticised the Hall of Fame, saying he wasn't interested in receiving an award from"some geriatric in a cowboy hat".He added, perhaps sarcastically, that Oasis didn't deserve their nomination "as much as Mariah [Carey]".

"She smashed it," he noted.In the end, both Oasis and Carey were overlooked last year - with voters choosing to induct Cher, Mary J Blige, Ozzy Osbourne and A Tribe Called Quest instead.Asked for her thoughts on the snub, Carey said: "My thoughts are: I didn't get in."My lawyer got into the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame before me," she added, referencing entertainment lawyer Allen Grubman - who also represented clients like Madonna, Bruce Springsteen and Lady Gaga.Grubman was inducted into the Rock Hall in 2022 as the recipient of the Ahmet Ertegun Award, which honours music industry figures.Carey is one of the most egregious oversights in the Hall of Fame's history.