

Iran Says Washington Hardening Peace Process

Iranian Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi. Photo: CNN

Iranian Foreign Minister Abbas Araghchi has said that the United States' "excessive demands" have become the main obstacle to the ongoing peace negotiations. He made the remarks during a phone conversation with UN Secretary-General António Guterres regarding the Pakistan-mediated talks.

According to an aljazeera.com report published on Saturday (May 23), Araghchi accused the United States of breaking commitments, maintaining a dual stance, and exerting military pressure. Despite this, Tehran is continuing to participate seriously in the negotiations under Pakistan's initiative.

Citing Iran's Foreign Ministry, tasnimnews.com reported that Guterres emphasized the importance of a diplomatic solution and opposed interference in the sovereignty of any country.

Meanwhile, discussions over a possible U.S.-Iran agreement have intensified further. In this context, Pakistan's Army Chief Asim Munir has arrived in Tehran.