Dr. Yunus Announces February Elections, Pledges Not to Hold Any Position After Polls

Collected picture

Chief Adviser of Bangladesh's interim government, Professor Dr. Muhammad Yunus, has announced that national elections will be held in February and confirmed that he will not hold any elected or appointed position in the subsequent government. In an article published in a US-based media outlet, he discussed election preparations, reforms, international relations, and the country's future.

Chief Adviser of Bangladesh's interim government, Professor Dr. Muhammad Yunus, has announced that national elections will be held in February and confirmed that he will not hold any elected or appointed position in the subsequent government. In an article published in a US-based media outlet, he discussed election preparations, reforms, international relations, and the country's future.

LENS ASIA