The government will take steps soon to implement the July Ordinance. Legal Advisor Asif Nazrul stated that a clear decision on this matter will be announced within the next three to four days. He expressed hope that political parties would respond positively to the government's decision.

He made these remarks on Tuesday (11 November) afternoon during an exchange of views at the Judicial Training Institute on the revised draft of the "Legal Assistance Provision Ordinance 2025."

The legal advisor said, "Reform is an ongoing process; it is not correct to think that everything can be changed suddenly. Only continuous, gradual changes will yield sustainable results."

He further commented, "The constitution itself is not a magical document—it requires political will and consistent implementation to be effective." He also expressed optimism that this continuity of reform will be maintained under an elected government.
