The Israeli military has claimed responsibility for an airstrike on a Hezbollah-linked facility in southern Beirut, Lebanon, saying the target was an important base of the group.

According to a report by The Jerusalem Post on Sunday (June 7), the Israel Defense Forces (IDF) said the operation was carried out in the Dahieh area of Beirut, a known stronghold of Hezbollah.

In a joint statement, Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Defense Minister Israel Katz said the strike was a response to attacks carried out by Hezbollah against Israeli territory.

No confirmed information on casualties or damage has been released so far. Hezbollah has not issued an official response regarding the incident.
